

*Every Friday we feature one of the garments from the magazine in a post about styling. We suggest different ways to wear the garment in question using mock-ups from Polyvore. We encourage readers to tell us what they think about these outfits via our Facebook page or Twitter, and if folks want to make their own outfits, please tweet them at us with the hashtag #twiststyle. Happy Fridays knitting loves. Your faithful stylist blogger has been thinking about fashion a lot lately- I'm going back to school and also starting an internship in an office context, and I have to think about my clothes as more than just morning dress-up playtime. We can project so much with what we choose to wear! This all relates to Style Fridays- because writing this feature has really helped me see how one clothing item on its own, even if it's something patterned, or bold, or bright, can take on totally different personalities and connotations depending on what else you wear it with. Let's look at a knitted garment, shall we?

When I first looked at this sweater, I could only see it as it is pictured above. With jeans, ideally nicely worn in ones, outside near a barn. Fara just seems so happy there! All I could imagine for variations were outfits that would also seem at home in the above frame- maybe with slightly fancy shoes so you could wear it in the city as well as near the barn. Things like this:

They totally work. The sweater is cozy and cool, and it works like a casual henley or long-sleeved tee. But people- this sweater has been calling to me. It's been telling me that it has a harder edge too. That it can be tough. I know this sort of style isn't everyone's thing, but knitters- 90's nostalgia is totally cool right now, and the word this sweater was whispering to me was this: grunge. Please please someone wear outfits like this while listening to Pearl Jam's Ten, and looking at a poster of Kurt Cobain's face. And feel totally free to sew patches onto your denim vest. Or lace inserts. Or floral panels. Or tell me what this sweater is whispering to you- or what colors you want to make it in! I can't wait. I'll be on Facebook.

How would you wear your Fara?
